President Murdaugh Forecasts the Year's Work

PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS

Of Oklahoma-His Theory of "Continuous Schools."

Guthrie, O. T., Sept. 3 - (Special.) - President Murdaugh, of the Normal schoool for Oklahoma at Edmond, expresses himself very enthusiastically concerning the prospects of the school and condition of educational interests generally in the ter-

Since his return from the National Educational association and the East generally, where he spent the month of July, the ster portion of his time has been devoted to craveling over the territory in the tectures and uddresses before institutes and graduating classes. In nearly every instance he found the institutes largery attended and the work energetically and ensustastically done. The action of the critorial board in examining instructors and conductors previous to the issuance of Hospises, weeded out all save the strongest teachers and the wisdom of their action is shown in the excellent organizalion and high pedagogic tone of the summer normals. Everywhere, the idea seems to be growing that the institute is the place for pedagogic rather than academic Of course, much may be done in om to be realizing that the ic work should be done elsewhere, and that the institute in the place for es and consultation under good Again, there seems to be a strong on the part of the people generally territorial institutions without difreparatory departments, with the graded

President Murdaugh &s on ardent ellever In normal school work, and claims that normal schools, besides giving a well aunded and practical themselves, most excellent feeders to the higher and the university.

the coming session thenumber of students at Edmond would be limited solely by the ability of the town to take care of them, and he was glad to say that the same was true at the university at Norman. President Boyd had told him some two weeks were already exhausted. At Edmond, there were still openings for a few students. Speaking of the attendance at the normul last year, he said that the gain over the previous year was 46 per cent, and that, while the local attendance was maintained, the increase in number of students from other counties than Oklahoma over per cent. There were students from every county of Oklahoma except in the extreme equal to those of admottd.

He believes that the Edmond school is admirably situated because of its central natural advantages, and that Edmond is Mestined to be the school town of the tertivery. One fulng is especially favorable to Edmond; the fact that Edmond is probterritory. In other respects the school is fully equipped for work-having fine labpratories, a most excellent library, the largest assembly hall in the territory, and the board of education has indicially expended between six and eight thousand Bollars in the equipment and interior fitticed is the opening of the department of elecution and eratory under the charge of recommended by thethend professor of the versity of Chicago, where she has been indying for some time past. IN A PORTO RICAN TOWN Adjustas Described as a Sample of the Lot.

Adjuntas, Porto Rico, Aug. 18.—During my stay in Ponce I made a vigorous effort to obtain a history of Porto Rico. I The Eagle's was only able to learn that one might be obtained at Madrid. But the steamship lines between the island and that city Fills the Bill, another name, which seems to have been its old original Carib title. It is common y given as Borinquen, though the bes authority on the island assert that it should read Boriquen. Elther or neither may be correct, but Borinquen appears to be a name held in high esteem by many of the native people.

Until some historical work be obtainable, it is only possible to treat these new cities and towns of the United States from topographical and sociological stand points. The district of which the town of Adjuntas is the principal center includes a large slice of the best coffee growing territory of the island. Here the coffee industry assumes very considerable roportions, and one sees the plant grow ing on al sides. An excelent article is produced, and good prices are usually obtained for it. The greater portion of the crop finds its market on the European continent. A Porto Rican coffee plantation does not present any very marked difference in apearance from the rest of the country. The bush, or shrub, growing to some eight or ten feet in height, is set out on no apparent system, and grows mixed up with bananas and forest timber. one knews what it is, one might easily pass a whole plantation and beeve that he had seen nothing but a some what scattered forest with its usual undergrowth of scrub and thicket. Locally, the coffee is served in small cups, and is also excellent. erest of the normal school, delivering cation in a narrow valley, whose border rise sharply and steeply to the summits of the surrounding hills. A little stream which the people of the place dignify with the title of El Rie (the river), runs through the town, and makes itself very useful for laundry purposes a la Porto Rico. In the heart of the village an open space is turned into a public park, with cross-walks, shrubbery and brilliant flowno particular syldence of skillful gardening, but the place is quite attractive, and onstitutes a pleasant relief to some of is dingy surroundings. Here and there a private residence shows a rank garden-growth of bright hued flowers. But, on he whole, the long and straggling town s not particularly attractive. Most o is houses are more cabins, and few of even the better class are at all home-like rom the American standpoint. The Span ish people and their kindred it would seem to have but two ideas regarding a rest-There appears to be no man between the casa, with its patio, abutting immediately upon the sidewalk, and wall to wall others very much like it, and the country seat a good distance from any neighbors. Naturally, the poorer class can have neither, but in a country where fand is sufficiently abundant, there is no whin immediately uponetharollulmur-lm reason for setting every little cabin im-mediately upon the edge of the roadway. and within two or htree feet of the buildings on either side of it. ure, one story in height, and painted, like many Porto Rican buildings, of all chisses, a pale blue, with white trimmings in it are the offices of the Alcalde, who seems to be something more than a mayor are and something less than a governor There are also the offices of the different tres (philosophical, classical, etc.,) of legal official dignaturies of the district pur universities. This fact alone is a From the numerical relation of the police force to the population, one might infer-"Bitter Creek," where everybody was bad, normal, Persident Murdaugh said that at | and the higher up one went the more and more wicked he found the people. In the United States a village which needed a diceman to every hundred of its inhabitants would be shunned by all, and oon be deserted by all who did not stay behind for the express purpose of killing would have a constable or two, or a marshal with a deputy. shal with a deputy.

Adjuntas claims a population of 2,200, and has a chief of police, with a force of twenty men under him. They are in ample evidence in the principal streets, no. 2 (Colorado Springs, No. 2 (Colorado Springs, Denver and Pacific Colorado Springs, Denve Amonio Millon, the parish priest of Adjuntus. Hats off to the good Patire with the broad badge of the Spanish Rod Cross Society on his shoulders.

Adjuntas has stores. It has many of them. From all appearances the majority of them either carry a stock of liquor as an adjunct to a stock of m scelleneous merchandise to an adjunct to a bar-room department of history and literature, la I am told there are no restrictions he widely known throughout the territory as upon the sale of liquot, and I can see to The school new has a full corps: toxication.
